Topic The Urban Forest Management Plan toolkit is a free, interactive online tool that provides a framework and process to developing an urban forest management plan. This tool allows multiple collaborators to develop a work plan from analysis through implementation.

This presentation will guide participants through the urban forestry assessment and planning process using this interactive tool. The tool allows a collaborative effort to result in a detailed and usable planning document.

The Urban Forest Management Plan (UFMP) Toolkit website can be used by anyone managing a large population of trees in or near urban areas. The toolkit is intended to help urban forest managers develop management plans that are appropriate for their urban forests. Check out this free tool here: <http://ufmptoolkit.com/>

The speaker: Dr. Swiecki has extensive research experience in urban forestry, sustainable management, and California oak ecology. Dr. Swiecki was other areas of research interest include urban forestry and the sustainable management of both natural and urbanized landscapes. Diagnosis of plant problems and the design and analysis of field studies are areas of specialization for Dr. Swiecki.
